

It is true that Ivory Soap is used for laundry purposes. But the kind of laundry purposes for which it is used is just another proof of its excellence for bath and toilet. For Ivory washes safely the exquisite linens and laces, the gossamer-like silks, the delicately colored materials that you would not dare risk to the average toilet soap.

In other words, Ivory Soap is the mildest, purest, best soap for the bath and toilet that can be made.

Cities Have No Say.

According to a law which was passed at the last session of the legislature, cities of the first and second class will have no voice in the election of county superintendent this fall. Under the law, the election of county superintendent is restricted to the territory outside of these two classes of cities, and in Cherokee County takes the election from Columbus, Galena, Scammon, Wier City and Baxter Springs.

The law undoubtedly will cause many would-be candidates for that office to hesitate before leaping into the harness. Cutting out the support of all the larger towns and putting the election up to the farmers and the small towns, will take away all means of comparison with former elections and will make conditions rather peculiar for candidates. The person winning the office will be the one who is able to swing the farmer vote.

The law applies to both primary and general elections, and carries instructions to county clerks to omit the names of the candidates for county superintendent from the ballots used in first and second class cities. In Cherokee County the rule will apply to only second class cities, there being no first class cities in the county. Following is a copy of Section 1 of the law:

"In any primary election held for the purpose of nominating candidates for county offices, and in any general election held for the election of county officers the right to vote for candidates for the office of county superintendent of public instruction shall be restricted to the qualified electors residing in said county and not residing in any city of the first or second class; and the ballots prepared for use in cities of the first or second class in said primary or general election shall not contain the names of candidates for the office of county superintendent of public instruction; provided, that nothing in this act shall disqualify a person residing in any portion of the county from being elected to the office of county superintendent."

There are many persons, however, who are inclined to believe that the law is unconstitutional and are urging that some prospective candidate bring a friendly suit against the county clerk to compel that official to place the candidate's name on the ballots for first and second class cities. They say the suit could be carried to the supreme court where the validity of the law would be established.

The legislators undoubtedly had the idea, when they passed the law, that the people who are served by the county superintendent should have the sole voice in electing that official and as the county superintendent has supervision over rural schools and third class cities only, they decided to take the election from first and second class cities. This seems to be the only argument in favor of the law.

But lawyers say there are two grounds on which the validity of the law can be attacked, and either one they say would be sufficient to prove that the law should be declared unconstitutional. One is that the county at large is assessed to pay the county superintendent's salary and the other expense of that office, and for that reason every voter in the county has a right to demand that he be given the privilege of having a voice in the election of that official. The other ground is that the county superintendent is chairman and a member of the board of trustees of the county high school, and as the high school is maintained by the county at large, every voter has a right to say how the school shall be conducted, and must be given the privilege of casting a vote for the chairman of the board of trustees. Not all counties have high schools, but Cherokee County could attack the law from such an angle.—Columbus Advocate.

Farmers and Dudelets

"Oh, he's just a farmer out here in the country."

We stood on a street corner the other day and heard that remark passed by one of the "brilliant" young masculine striplings of our town as he "bummed" the makings from a friend.

The farmer, to be sure, was just a farmer "out here in the country." He wore overalls and drove his wagon into town, but at home his automobile rested snugly in the garage. He owns one of the most valuable farms in this whole section of the state. His home life is ideal and his wife and children have everything they desire. His simple word is as good as his check, and his check would be honored for a sum that might stagger you.

He is a man, a real man, a man whom other men acknowledge to be a man among men, even if he is "just a farmer out here in the country."

But what of the stripling, what of the dudelet?

He is just one of that numerous class who always know everything and never do anything, who amount to nothing and are worth less. He is just a dudelet, and it is doubtful if he ever attains to the "dignity" of being a real dude.

Yes, he is "just a farmer out here in the country," but he is our friend, he is everybody's friend, and time may prove him to be the "friend in need" of the poor, rapid, brainless dudelet.

We need a thousand more just like him—this man who is "just a farmer out here in the country," and whom we are proud to know as our friend.

Poor, deluded dudelet! May he never be worse!

No trouble at all to get a reputation these days. All you have to do is be a wise one or a d. f.
